Resco Contact Manager provides complex contact information in a simple and fashionable way

Contact information provided by built-in “Contacts” is mostly represented by a list of basic facts with a photo and an option to make a call. In general, that’s it. If you need more information such as call registry, mutual SMS, or an option to write an e-mail, in most cases you have to seek elsewhere. With Resco Contact Manager you don’t. The application locates all the contact operations in one place and provides complex contact information in simple and fashionable way. What do we mean by complex information? Let’s have a closer look.

All the necessary facts about each contact can be found in organized form in so called “Contact Cards”. To see the card open a contact and find a button “Details” on the left side of the bottom bar. The information is split into 5 pages: Phone, Home, Business, Web and Note. Phone page provides basic facts such as phone numbers, email, birthday and ringtone. Home displays home address and phone number. Business shows the same, but those of work. Web displays e-mails, websites and IM. Notes serve for any additional information. Although these facts are displayed by built-in “Contacts” as well, it’s mostly just a part of them and in a poor form. Any of the addresses can be easily located on a map. Choose an address, make a tap and select “Locate on Map”. Google Maps application or online Google Maps (depends whether you have the application installed or not) is run thereafter and searches the destination.

Contact photos are necessary part of each contact description and represent a strong need for fully comfort work with the application. They serve for immediate orientation of the user and, therefore, are displayed next to contacts in every possible situation. Coming from these facts the program intuitively pushes each user to attach as many contact photos as possible. Easy attaching interface and access to many photo sources support this statement. Undoubtedly, the best way how to get lots of contact photos is via Facebook integration. Facebook support also gives you the option to get mounds of personal information about contacts to your phone without the need of typing them manually, plus you get the ability to send messages straight to Facebook.

Complete call history with a certain contact can be found under the button “History” at the contact’s bottom bar. Length of the history depends on the settings. User is also given a filter for incoming/outgoing/missed calls.

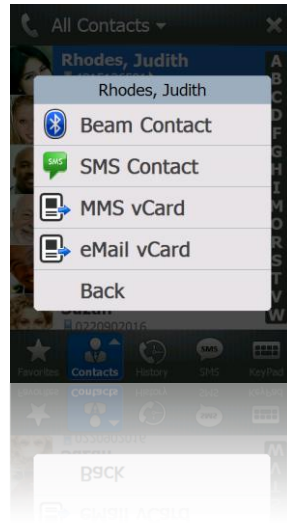

All the text messages between you and the contact are grouped into a “thread” called “chat”. This chat is accessible from the bottom bar as well under the name “Chat”. The orientation in chat dialog is touch-optimized as most of other dialogs in the program. This way you can easily and especially quickly find the right SMS you are searching for.

The application also locates all the contact operations in one place which saves you time and brings more comfort. From one place you can make a call, send SMS, MMS or e-mail, set ringtone, attach photo or send the contact via infrared, Bluetooth, MMS or e-mail as vCard. All of these options are accessible in the main contact dialog or from its menu.

The complexity of contact information and the fashionable way of how it is being provided can be hardly found by other competitive contact managers. Therefore, Resco believes it to be a strong attribute appreciated especially by its users.
